2023 budget is a painted document

-C4C MP charges

By Jariatu S. Bangura

The Member of Parliament representing the opposition Coalition for Change (C4C) party, Hon. Sahr Charles, has described the 2023 budget as a well painted document that does not reflect the theme that was given to it.

The budget was presented by the Minister of Finance, Dr. Dennis K. Vandi, on the theme 'seeking to address the needs of the vulnerable in the context of the multiple crises.'

Contributing to the ongoing debate on the budget, he noted that the government started in a very good footing during their first three to six months in office with regards to the implementation of the Treasury Single Account (TSA) and financial discipline, but has relaxed over the years with leakages they promised to sealed, more widely opened.

LOCAL NEWS APC Lawyers go to Supreme Court

By Alhaji Haruna Sani

Lawyers representing the main opposition All People's Congress (APC) Party headed by Dr. Abdulai O. Conteh Joseph Fitzgerald Kamara (JFK), Africanus Sesay, Ady Maculey et al have filed an Originating Notice of Motion urging the Supreme Court to declare President Bio's directive to change 2023 electoral system to Proportional Representation (PR) as unconstitutional and void.

The Battery of lawyers on November 28, 2022 informed the general public that they have filed an originating Notice of Motion with the Supreme Court for a Declaration amongst others, that the Directive issued by President Bio, to the Electoral Commission of Sierra Leone (ECSL), to hold public elections for ordinary Members of Parliament by the PR System, where there are extant and subsisting constituencies, is inconsistent with Section 38A of Constitutional Amendment, Act No.15 of 2001.

They therefore, urged the Supreme Court in the filed Originating Notice of Motion to declare null and void the Presidential Directive and Statutory Instruments No. 83 of 16th November 2022 now purportedly laid before Parliament.

"It will be recalled, that Proportional Representation, is itself a product of its time. It is a fall-back position when there are no constituencies or wards for the purposes of public elections in the country. This was the rationale and the prevailing circumstances that warranted and justified the amendment introduced in 2001 as now contained in section 38A of the Constitution," the notice reads.

According to the erudite Lawyers, the country had then just come through a brutal and destabilizing rebel war which resulted in the destabilization of communities nationwide, apart from the loss of human lives and destruction of property.

An immediate effect of such a situation, according to them was the absence of settled communities and constituencies which they said was justifiable by then. "It was then seen as a contingency provision and not intended to be a regular format for public or general elections for Parliament. They intimated".

The lawyers challenged that the conditions for PR System do not now prevail in the country and therefore recourse cannot lawfully and properly be had to such a system, in the face of existing constituencies and wards.

According to the Lawyers, the power given to the Electoral Commission is to conduct and supervise elections, and not to determine the form or mode of Elections.

"Section 68 of the Public elections Act 2022 is clear as to what constitutes the conduct of elections. To change the format or mode of elections is a matter of primary legislation, reserved for the Legislature and not the subject of a Statutory Instrument," they opined.

The layers said in all of those, the controversy generated by the purported Presidential Directive and the irregularity of Statutory Instrument No.83 2022 cannot be underscored, as it degenerated into Parliamentary chaos, public shock and concern.

However, popular and controversial female opposition politician, Dr. Sylvia Olayinka Blyden scolded lawyers of the APC over what she claimed to be faulty-like drafted papers filed at the Supreme Court on November 28, 2022.

"I confirm that Supreme Court, by Law, has physically served on Attorney General, a case against President Bio's direction of ECSL's Mohamed Kenewui Konneh to us PR for 2023 Elections. I support the case but I have tonight strongly advised Joseph Fitzgerald Kamara esq to more closely study those papers filed," Sylvia Blyden twitted.

Kush on the rampage: Health Ministry holds emergency meeting

Members of MOHs and key stakeholder in the health sectors

Ministry of Health and Sanitation (MoHS), has in response to the nation-wide 'KUSH' predicament, summoned a multi sector action engagement on Tuesday, November 29, at the MoHS conference room.

The Deputy Chief Medical Officer (Public Health), Dr. Alie Wurie, said the engagement brought together representatives from WHO, Ministry of Social Welfare, FoRUT, Youth Ministry and Police to brainstorm and develop concrete recommendations in dealing with the rapidly growing destructive substance.

The Medical Superintendent of the Kissy Psychiatric Teaching Hospital, Dr. Abdul Jalloh, made a clinical presentation, outlining the nature and effects of Kush.

He said the effects of Kush were not limited to agitation, but insomnia, irritability, dizziness, depression, paranoia, delusions, suicidal thoughts, seizures, panic attacks, increased heart rate, and increased blood pressure.

He maintained that their full effects on humans are not fully known, but that it's also agreed that it can result to violent behaviour and death.

He said the problem with Kush, according to his findings, is that it's completely synthetic; so anyone can add whatever they want to it and alter the formula.

He said the only similarity it has with marijuana is the way it is ingested.

He further stated that the chemical compounds in Kush affect the brain differently from THC, which is the chemical in marijuana that gives users a high dose.

He said Kush is extremely dangerous compared to the effects received from marijuana.

He said the government and the security sector should pay great attention to the importation of 'KUSH' in the country, noting that with the increase of KUSH in the country the youth will be in total disarray.

"Recently, I've noticed on social media a lot of young people dying untimely deaths, running mad, harming themselves. I hear these horrors are being caused as a result of them taking 'Kush' he said

The engagement was wrapped up with recommendations including public education, political commitment, pharmaceutical and security sector interventions.

Hon. Sahr Charles

He noted that for the past years, Audit reports have not been debated even though concerns had been raised by other colleagues.

Hon. Charles said government has no authority to utilise funds without the approval of Parliament and that the necessity for MPs to do due diligence was very important.

He said the budget is not ruling party document, but a national document that should give value to the financial needs of the people.

He charged that the theme of the budget was deceiving, stating that all measures highlighted by the Minister in the speech were not tangible.

He said for the past years, the budget speech brought to Parliament continues to be repeated contents year in and out with the same excuses.

He said other countries are growing even in the midst of the global crisis while Sierra Leone is lagging behind, adding that amidst the outcry of global crisis, timber export is still ongoing with other sectors like the tourism continue explore, yet the government continues to cry out loud about economic problems.

He said government should be looking for ways to help boost the economy of the country, leaving the numerous challenges they always mentioned in their budget speech for the past four years.

He said even nations that do not have natural resources continue to boom their economy.

He said the amount given to the Road Maintenance Fund for the rehabilitation of roads was huge but that much has not been done so far, especially in the capital city.

IFAD, ADVP teams and project sites across country

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), Agriculture Value Chain Development (ADVP), Financial Service Association (FSA), Ministry of Agriculture and APEX bank, have concluded a four-day monitoring tour to their project sites in Bo, Kenema, Makeni, Mile 91, and Port Loko District, respectively.

The delegation, which was made up of eight Board members from different nations across the world, visited the different sites in order to have first-hand information about the impacts their programmes have had on the lives of the people.

During the visitations to the different sites, the team of board members interacted with the farmers, bike riders, mechanics, whose lives have been transformed with the support of IFAD. The Executive Board of IFAD over the past four decades has provided support to Sierra Leone, amounting to over two hundred million United State Dollars ($200m).

Even through rice, oil palm, coco and vegetables are currently the key intervention areas of the IFAD funding, but they have also supported hosts of young people and even the middle age through loans being provided by Apex Banks.

The Programme manager for the Agricultural Value Chain Development Project (AVDP), Monica Kwame Green, said AVDP is now working in ten districts across the country in the IFAD project.

She said the AVDP has increased production and improved the marketing of rice, palm oil, cocoa and vegetables, contributing to the Government's priorities of rice self-sufficiency, crop diversification and rural poverty reduction.

She added that they were still working with their farmers to see how they have improve productivities in the ten districts that they are working, adding that over the years they have been able to cultivate over 100 acres of groundnut and for rice they were targeting four thousand five hundred acres of land.

She said they were supporting five thousand beneficiaries in various districts in the country.

She added that the new project will increase production and improve the marketing of rice, palm oil, cocoa and vegetables, contributing to the Government's priorities of rice self-sufficiency, crop diversification and rural poverty reduction.

She said they have been having lot of challenges in weather conditions on cultivation of resistance crops variety that withstand changes in climate patters.

31-yrs- old Adam Conteh has been sentenced by Justice Momoh Jah Stevens (JA) to fifteen years imprisonment after he was found guilty of sexually abusing a twelve-year-old child at his Wellington, Portee residence.

Conteh was before the court on one count of sexual penetration contrary to Section 19 of the Sexual Offence Act No 12 of 2012, as repealed and replaced by Section 4 of the Sexual (Amendment) Act of 2019 Act No.8 of 2019.

The State Lawyer, M.P Sesay, alleges that the convict on 25th June, 2020, at Wellington, Portee in the Western Area of the Republic of Sierra Leone, engaged in an act of sexual penetration with a child below the age of eighteen to wit five-year-old.

After the defense closed their case, an option was given to the accused to select whether he wanted to rely on his statement he made to the police, take the witness stand or call witness or testify in the dock. But the accused informed the court through his lawyer from the Legal Aid Board that, he relied on the statement he made to the police.

Meanwhile, Justice Momoh Jah Stevens immediately withdrew the file for judgement.

The judge recalled that the accused had pleaded not guilty to the offence as charged, adding that the prosecution brought four witness including the Aunt and Mother of the victim.

He said in the case of the prosecution, they also made an application for the matter to be tried by judge alone, which he granted accordingly.

However, Justice Stevens (JA) in his ruling stated that, the victim testified that the accused always come to the house to visit her elder sister at Portee almost everyday

He said the victim in her testimony in court narrated how the accused convinced her to follow him into his house and sexually penetrated her. "I submit that the prosecution has proven it case beyond all reasonable doubt against the accused person.

I therefore hold the accused guilty as charged of sexual penetration. He is therefore sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment," he ordered.

Man jailed 36 months for theft

By Yusufu S. Bangura

On Tuesday, 29th November, 2022, during the November criminal session at the Freetown High Court presided over by Justice Alusine Sesay JSC, eighteen years old Mohamed Turay alias Kolor-kolor, was jailed 36 months for stealing from a store.

The convict was before the court on one count of store breaking and larceny contrary to Section 26(1) of the Larceny Act 1916.

It was alleged that the convict on the 8th April 2022 in Freetown broke and entered into the store of Umaru Conteh with intent to steal therein 15 full lengths iron rods valued 3,150,000 old Leones property of the said complainant.

After the charge was read and explained to the accused person, he pleaded guilty and he was convicted by the Bench.

However, State prosecutor, Jessie S. Tucker told the Bench that based on the records there were no criminal charges against the convict.

In her plea of mitigation on behalf of the convict, Lawyer Cecilia Tucker from Legal Aid Board said his client did not waste the court time by answering to the offense, adding that he was a first time offender of law.

She continued that the convict is a young man that has a brighter future ahead of him and he has learnt his lesson while in remand.

Before sentencing the convict, Justice Sesay asked the convict if he has anything to tell him and the convict later plead with the judge to temper him just with mercy and promised the court that he would not commit such act again.

However, Justice Sesay sentenced the convict to 36 months imprisonment at the Male Correctional Centre in Freetown considering the time he has spent in remand.

Qatar World Cup: Which prospects for African teams as group stage draws to a close?

The second fixtures of the group phase of 2022 Qatar World Cup ended Monday (Nov. 29) with two exciting performances by Cameroon and Ghana. Overall, the 5 representatives of African nations were able to raise up their game.

Africa's representatives at the 22nd FIFA World Cup can still qualify for the round of 16. With some provided with bigger or slimmer chances. France, Portugal and Brazil are the first nations that booked their ticket for the next stage.

Bets are open ahead of the fixture Senegal-Ecuador. The Netherlands only need a point to advance in the tournament. On Tuesday (Nov. 29), they'll play already eliminated hosts Qatar.

The African champions must win to qualify and will want to build on their strong offensive performance against the Qataris (3-1). A draw would qualify the Central American team, which is worried about its captain Enner Valencia, co-top scorer of the tournament (3 goals) who suffered a knee injury.

Standing: Netherlands (4 pts), Ecuador (4pts), Senegal (3pts), Qatar (0 pt).

GROUP D
Tunisia will play reigning champions France on Wednesday (Nov. 30). 'Les Bleus' became the first team to qualify for the next round when beating Denmark (2-1) on November 26 and are expected to rotate their squad for their last group game.

The Carthage Eagles can keep their dream to reach a knockout stage spot in 6th World Cup appearance if they beat the French substitute team. In addition to that, Australia vs Denmark should end in a draw.

For the Danes to qualify they must beat the Australians and hope for a draw or a France's victory in the other fixture of the group.

Standing: France (6pts), Australia (3pts), Denmark (1 pt), Tunisia (1pt).

GROUP F
Morocco is in a rather comfortable position ahead of its match against already eliminated Canada on Thursday, December 1st.

Croatia, the finalist of the 2018 World Cup, need to secure a draw to move forward. Belgium will play its qualification on Thursday in a stressful clash against the Croats. A success would send the Red Devils through the round of 16. A defeat would mean elimination. In case of a draw, their fate would be in the hands of Morocco.

Standing: Croatia (4 pts), Morocco (4pts), Belgium (3pts), Canada (0pt).

GROUP G
Cameroon secured a draw against Serbia in dramatic fashion on Monday (Nov. 28). The Indomitable Lions will remember an eventful and historic day as they scored a first point in the World Cup in 20-years.

They are however in a complicated position ahead of their game against Brazil on Friday (Dec. 2).

The Selecao qualified after beating Switzerland with a goal by Casemiro to reach the knockout stage on November 28.

Switzerland will have to dominate Serbia to secure a spot in the next round.

Standing: Brazil (6pts), Switzerland (3pts), Cameroon (1pt), Serbia (1pt).

GROUP H
Ghana vs Uruguay already has a taste of legend. The fixture is a repeat of the 2010 quarter finals as well as a must-win for the Black Stars.

The game provides an opportunity to even the score in the rivalry and is a decisive match to advance in the Qatar World Cup.

Cristiano Ronaldo's Portugal qualified after beating Uruguay on Monday (Nov. 28). The Portuguese will face South Korea on Friday (Dec. 2). The situation is critical for South Korea and Uruguay, but both teams can still qualify.

Standing: Portugal (6pts), Ghana (3pts), South Korea (1pt), Uruguay (1pt).

Stowaways survive 11 days on rudder of ship travelling from Nigeria to Canary Islands

In this photo released by Spain's Maritime Safety and Rescue Society on Tuesday Nov. 29, ... - Copyright © africanews AP/AP

Spain's Maritime Rescue Service has rescued three stowaways traveling on a ship's rudder in the Canary Islands after the vessel sailed there from Nigeria.

The men, found on the Alithini II oil tanker at the Las Palmas port, appeared to have symptoms of dehydration and hypothermia after spending about eleven days clinging to the rubber of the oil tanker.

The three were subsequently transferred to hospitals on the island for medical attention, Spain's Salvamento Marítimo said.

According to the Marine Traffic website which tracks ships, the Malta-flagged vessel left Lagos, Nigeria on Nov. 17 and arrived in Las Palmas Monday.

Though extremely dangerous, it is not the first-time stowaways have been found traveling on the rudder of commercial ships to the Canary Islands.

Last year a 14-year-old Nigerian boy was interviewed by Spain's El País newspaper after surviving two weeks on a ship's rudder. He had also departed from Lagos.

Cameroon: Rescue efforts continue, as death toll from landslide increases to 15

At least 15 people died Sunday in a landslide on a hillside where a crowd was attending a funeral in a popular neighborhood of Yaoundé, the Cameroonian capital, the governor of the region told AFP Monday in a new report.

A few hours after the tragedy, Naseri Paul Bea, the governor of the Centre region, announced on the state radio CRTV that 11 people had died but that the search was continuing for possible other victims.

"We are now at 15 dead," he told AFP on Monday morning, some time after a dozen firefighters began digging with shovels on an imposing pile of red earth at the foot of the hill in this neighborhood of Damascus, in the east of Yaoundé, according to an AFP correspondent on the spot. Around them, a hundred residents and onlookers were kept at a distance by police officers.

A little further on, people entered two modest houses one by one to offer their condolences to two families who had lost their loved ones in the tragedy. One of them was a cab driver, his vehicle is still parked in front of the family home.

Late Sunday afternoon, at least one tent, among several others housing dozens of participants in a ceremony to honor five members of an association who died this year, was swept away by a landslide.

Four bodies had been quickly evacuated, covered with a white sheet, on the flatbeds of three police pickups and the rescuers then gradually removed 11 new deceased people, before stopping their search around 11 pm.

Four large white tents remained intact at the top of the hill but on the edge of a whole collapsed section, reported AFP reporter Sunday evening.

In the vicinity of the wasteland, there are relatively well-to-do houses in good condition and very precarious dwellings, like those, countless, sometimes made of wood and sheet metal, which cover the sides of the seven hills forming part of the relief of the Cameroonian capital, populated by more than four million inhabitants.

Anti-apartheid icon Chris Hani's grave vandalized

Chris Hani, leader of the Communist Party, outside the Rand Supreme Court in Johannesburg... - Copyright © africanews AP/Copyright 2022 The AP. All rights reserved.

The grave of anti-apartheid activist Chris Hani was vandalized in South Africa, a week after the controversial announcement of the early release of his killer, sources from the municipality of Ekurhuleni where the monument dedicated to his memory said on Tuesday (November 29).

"The monument was vandalized overnight from Saturday to Sunday. One of the pillars is badly damaged. One side collapsed and the lighting system was stolen," spokesperson Zweli Dlamini told AFP of the city located east of Johannesburg. An investigation was opened for theft and vandalism.

The monument consists of four marble columns symbolizing the pillars of the struggle against white power led by the African National Congress (ANC), in power since the advent of democracy in 1994.

A demonstration against the release of the assassin of Chris Hani, in the Hall of Heroes of the Anti-Apartheid Struggle and whose disappearance is commemorated each year in South Africa, gathered dozens of people on Saturday at the call of the ANC. The ANC said in a statement "deeply saddened by the vandalism and desecration" of the monument. Communist leader and senior member of the armed wing of the Liberation Party, Chris Hani, 50, was killed at close range in his driveway on April 10, 1993, by the Polish immigrant linked to the far-right white Afrikaner, Janusz Walus.

At the time, delicate negotiations with the white power in view of the first democratic elections in the country were underway. The assassination exacerbates racial tensions and provokes violent riots in the townships of South Africa shaken by the last gasps of the racist regime. In a vibrant televised speech, Nelson Mandela calls for calm.

Janusz Walus, now 69, had been sentenced to death but the new regime abolished capital punishment in 1994, and his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

After several refusals, the court granted him conditional release on November 21. He must be released from prison no later than December 1. Chris Hani's widow has denounced a "diabolical judgment".

UNESCO examining 56 proposals to add to Lists of Intangible Heritage

UNESCO inaugurates 17th intangible cultural heritage session in Morocco - Copyright © africanews AFP

The French baguette, Algerian Rai music and Tunisia's harissa condiment are among this year's contenders for recognition as intangible cultural heritage by UNESCO, which started deliberations Monday in Morocco.

The United Nations' cultural agency is examining 56 proposals for items to add to its Lists of Intangible Cultural Heritage, including four in urgent need of preservation -- including the pottery of the Cham people of central Vietnam.

This year's meetings in Morocco, which holds the organization's rotating presidency, are the first to be held in person since the coronavirus pandemic.

UNESCO will tweet its decisions starting from Tuesday afternoon.

Other contenders include a French-Belgian application for fairgrounds, the chai (tea) culture of Azerbaijan and Turkey, traditional Chinese tea-processing technique and a central Asian lute called the Rubab.

Cuban light rum and the Serbian plum brandy known as Slivovitz also make the list.

The organisation stresses that the list honours traditions, practices and knowledge and all such forms of culture that are "human treasures" that cannot be touched.

Rai music is on the list not just as a form of music but as a whole cultural tradition.

The 2003 Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage aims to safeguard and raise awareness about the "intangible cultural heritage of the communities, groups and individuals concerned".

"Intangible cultural heritage, transmitted from generation to generation, is constantly recreated by communities and groups in response to their environment, their interaction with nature and their history, and provides them with a sense of identity and continuity, thus promoting respect for cultural diversity and human creativity," it says.
